Bhode Island Suffrage.

The foreign pero cuiz ne of Rusac Island are making an effort to have the State constitution so altered as will give them the same rights of suffrage as are accorded the citizens of all the other States in the Union. In the House of Representatives last week Mr. Prendergast moved that the petition of the foreign born citizens for a constitutional convention be taken up, the question being on the recommendation of the Committee on the Judiciary that the potitioners have leave to withdraw. Mr. Prendergast spoke in favor of a constitutional convention and gave a sketch of the State's politioal history and quoted many authorities to show that the sovereign people may charge their constitution when they please. He also paid an el quent tribute to the valor and service of citizens of foreign birth in the war of the revos lution and the late civil war. In closing his speech he said :

I have shown that at the present time the same ratio os the propte is decied the right of suffrage as was decied that right in 1840 Out of the wrongs that then a seed came troubles which ended in the Dorr war. I have she wa that to remedy these evils the present constitu tion was given to the people, and though never adopted by a majority, still become the funds mental law. I have shown that at the time of its adoption our population was such that, owing to their pursuits, about two-thirds of the oiti zens were granted the right of suffrage. I have also shown that, owing priccipally to the change is our industries since 184J, the political power of the Biate has passed out of the hands of a majority and is now possessed by a small miner ity of our people, having dropped from twothirds to two fifths of the adult maies over twenty one years of aga, thus bringing ab at the same condition of affairs that existed prior to the Door war. These facts demonstrate pretty clearly that our present constitution has ou lived its usefulness, and owing to the demands of ir gress needs a redical change. It may be argued that it performs the tune tons of geveroment, but we must admit that while it distracchises ti ree fifth of our people it cannot be just. Mr. Speaker, let us refuse to continue this editus system longer. Let us burst the corroding chains of bigotry. Let us dispel the darkling clouds of intolerance, and let us allow the pure white light of justice and equality to shine with an unflickering light upon each and everyone within our border. Oh! how devoid of gratitude must be that people which remains deaf alike to the appeals of intelligence and patriotism, even though they come from battle fields made crimson with the blood of the petitioners in the defence of those who now refuse to grant their just request. Let us continue this unmany course no longer. Let us wipe from our State the stain that mars her otherwise fair fame, and henceforward the citizen of Knode Island may point to his state and proudly say: The spirit of toleration bas taken up its abode within our lines, the immortal doctrines of Roger Williams in regard to freedom in religion have been extended to the ballot, and every citizen may give voice to his sentiments at the polls. The doctrines of the fathers are being fully carried out, for here in its strictest sense we have s government of the people by the people and for the people "

After Mr. Prendergrast's speech, which was listened to with great interest, it was moved that the further consideration of the matter be con

A New Brieans Belle's Confessions. A bold reporter of New Orleage, in exploit ing upon a new field, has had the temerity to interview a society belle of that city, with the scowed purpose of obtaining her candid opinions about love making in general, and what she thought of the beaux she had encountered | dris and the surrounding country, and the past from the various sections of the country. If his account of the interview can be trusted, he was most successful, for he fills a column with the results. Never having encountered an Alexandria lover, she remains apparently heart whole, but avows her preference to the 'mashers" of her native city. She characteriz a them as proferring the door steps of an evening as the place for making love, but says they do so much of it that it becomes a second nature, and to keep up prectice they make very little difference whether the girls they are enjoying the monolight with are pretty or ugly, factionsting or supid. In this way they expend all their true love long before they are old enough to marry. Her opinion of Northern levers is not fluttering. They defer making love until they find out whether the lady is disposed in their tavor; and, of all the aggravating traits in a lover, that is the one she despises the most. The Chicago men she exempts from this obstracteristic. They never hesitate at any thing, but make love with the rapidity of a whirlwind; but it is very unsatisfactory, because if the lady's beart is not too much entangled. she fieds it impossible to get rid of him, and if he has not been sincere in his professions, he i just as utterly at a loss bow to extricate bimself. lo such cases he marries her, and in a few months cuts the poose with a divorce. She contenses to have had a great deal of experience with Virginia beaux. They are more honorable than those in any other locality, but they are all poor, and are not considered good catches. They are very tender and chivalrous, but, unfor unately, always fall in love with kirls who are far above them in worldly wealth. She admits that her heart was very serious y touched ty a Vi ginis lover, who, she was told, was in eary circumstances, but found afterward that his income was $700 a year. The peculiarity about the Virginia "smashers" is that they cannot do the subject justice unless they inveigle the lady to go ming with them in a busky. She was caught in that way and became engaged, because it was the custom in Virginia, and as she was at a watering place at the time, it would not do to be out of style. Of course, it came to nothing, the discarded lover
